

Informed probabilistic deep learning for net energy forecasting

- Trained expected energy models to forecast the net energy load using probabilistic deep learning methods
- Used large amount of publicly available data to source information regarding energy facilities in the area as well as local demand patterns

