

Net Load Forecast

- Net load forecasting model is developed as an ensemble of different modeling techniques i.e. deep learning neural network model and other ML techniques trained with historical net load data, weather features and calendar features.
- Proper noise models are selected for better probabilistic forecasts