

A floating platform rises and falls with each wave, while magnetic pistons are anchored to the sea floor. The magnetic pistons are free to move inside the aluminum tubes of the boiler. This motion creates heat, distilling pure water.