

Make some holes in the traditional buoy, and install the water turbine below, so as to use the wave to generate the power. Supply power for the monitoring device and charge the power for other marine measurement devices.